AGA Advocates provide a one-time or annual contribution to the American Galvanizers Association (AGA) in support of the North American hot-dip galvanizing industry. They are not considered full members of the AGA and therefore do not receive the full membership benefits. However, for their contribution, there will be special concessions and/or recognition offered which may change from year to year. AGA Advocates will have the opportunity to renew their status each year in October for the following calendar year.

At any time throughout the year, an AGA Advocate, who fits another membership category, can opt to convert to a full membership, and once approved their advocate contribution will be applied toward annual dues. If the Advocate contribution is less than the annual dues, the remaining dues payment will be required before full membership access is granted. Once an advocate converts to AGA Member, their membership will continue in full force and effect each ensuring year unless/until a written intent to withdraw is received by October 31st. Withdrawal from membership shall in no way release the resigning member from any financial responsibility to the Association for any dues, assessments, or other financial commitments accrued during the term of membership, nor shall it entitle the resigning member to the return of any dues, assessments, or entrance fees paid to the Association.

Current AGA Advocate Benefits
